List of United States cities by population

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

The following is a list of the most populous incorporated places in the United States. As defined by the United States Census Bureau, an "incorporated place" includes a variety of designations, including a city, town, village, borough, and municipality.^[a] Some census-designated places may also be included in the Census Bureau's listing of incorporated places.

^{[b][c]} Consolidated city-counties represent a distinct type of government that includes the entire population of a county, or county equivalent. Some consolidated city-counties, however, include multiple incorporated places.

This list presents only that portion (or "balance") of such consolidated city-counties that are not a part of another incorporated place.

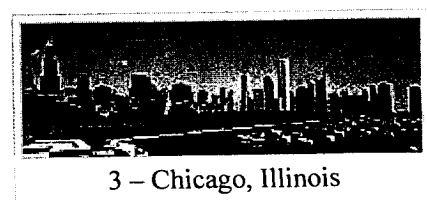

Note that this list refers only to the population of individual municipalities within their defined limits, which does not include other municipalities or unincorporated suburban areas within urban agglomerations. A different ranking is evident when considering U.S. metropolitan area populations.

Incorporated places over 100,000 population

The following table lists the incorporated places in the United States with a population of more than 100,000 as estimated by the United States Census Bureau for July 1, 2008.^[1] Population densities are also given by the U.S. Census Bureau, but are listed as of the 2000 U.S. Census.^{[2][3]}

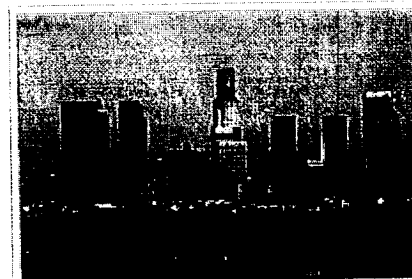

Since the U.S. Census Bureau typically does not rank the cities of U.S. territories along with those of the fifty states and the District of Columbia, the cities of Puerto Rico with populations greater than 100,000 are listed separately below.

If the entire population of the City and County was included, Honolulu would place 12th on the list above with a 2007 estimated population of 905,601.^[5]
- ^ c: Arlington CDP, Virginia, is coextensive with Arlington County. Virginia law forbids the creation of cities in counties with over 1,000 people per square mile, which Arlington County exceeds. Thus, the entire county is considered by the Census Bureau as one CDP. While not incorporated as a
